Literary Cultures and Public Opinion in the Low Countries, 1450–1650
On the cover: Triumphus Veritatis (The triumph of Truth). Allegorical scene with Truth, a female personification, seated at centre and reading a biblical quotation while holding up a flaming lamp; flanked by Opinion as an old, bespectacled man in a hooded robe with a lamp standing on a pile of books; and Falsehood, an old hag clutching snakes and lobsters, who tramples Lies, a half-skeletal creature clutching an orb in lower right; above two putti hold a palm and wreath and a scroll lettered “Veritas vincit omnia”; after Maarten de Vos. 1579. Engraving. With kind permission of the Trustees of the British Museum.

This book is printed on acid-free paper.
CONTENTS

List of Illustrations .................................................................................................................. vii
Preface ......................................................................................................................................... ix
    Jan Bloemendal, Arjan van Dixhoorn and Elsa Strietman

Chapter One  Literary Cultures and Public Opinion in the Early Modern Low Countries ................................................................................................. 1
    Jan Bloemendal and Arjan van Dixhoorn

Chapter Two  ‘You serve me well’: Representations of Gossip, Newsmongering and Public Opinion in the Plays of Cornelis Everaert ...................................................................................................................... 37
    Samuel Mareel

Chapter Three  ‘Please Do Not Mind the Crudeness of its Weave’: Literature, Gender and the Polemic Authority of Anna Bijns ............................................................................................................................. 55
    Judith Keßler

Chapter Four  The Morality of Hypocrisy: Gnapheus’s Latin
    Play Hypocrisie and the Lutheran Reformation ................................................................. 91
    Verena Demoed

Chapter Five  Playing to the Public, Playing with Opinion:
    Latin and Vernacular Dutch History Drama by Heinsius and Duym .................................................................................................................................. 121
    Juliette Groenland

Chapter Six  Hugo Grotius in Praise of Jacobus Arminius:
    Arminian Readers of an Epicedium in the Dutch Republic and England ............................................................................................................................... 151
    Moniek van Oosterhout

Chapter Seven  Manuscript Pamphlets and Made-Up
    Performances: New Sources and Challenges in the Study of Public Opinion ..................................................................................................................... 181
    Nelleke Moser
Chapter Eight ‘The Cry of the Royal Blood’: Revenge Tragedy and the Stuart Cause in the Dutch Republic, 1649–1660 .......................................................... 219
Helmer Helmers

Chapter Nine ‘A Vile and Scandalous Ditty’: Popular Song and Public Opinion in a Seventeenth-Century Dutch Village Conflict .............................................................. 251
Joke Spaans

Chapter Ten Early Modern Literary Cultures and Public Opinion: An Epilogue in the Form of a Discussion .......... 267
Jan Bloemendal and Arjan van Dixhoorn

Bibliography ................................................................. 293
About the Authors ....................................................... 313
Index of Names and Subjects ..................................... 315