Youth work starts where young people are. It is perhaps this general principle that seems to create a certain ‘myopic view’ in youth work practice, policy and research. We tend to concentrate on the questions of today and take them as a starting point for our future plans. This sometimes makes youth work an uncertain and fragile practice. The lack of historical consciousness makes youth work vulnerable to instrumentalisation, whether by policymakers or even by young people themselves, claiming youth work should fulfil the needs they define to be urgent and relevant.

Youth work is a contingent practice and history will not reveal us its one and only real identity. Knowing where we come from, however, is an important step in establishing a confident, though not arrogant, identity. Youth work is a social and pedagogical practice that must be adapted to very diverse historical, geographic and social contexts, but there are still some underlying, basic assumptions that have structured practices and policies to date and continue to do so. In this light, a cross-cultural and transnational perspective can be most enlightening.

This second volume of The history of youth work in Europe, presents the youth work histories of some very different countries: Belgium and its three communities, the Netherlands, Ireland, Wales and Hungary. The reader is also introduced in the history of the relatively young European youth policies, and is even given a glimpse beyond European borders with a history of youth work in South Africa.
The history of youth work in Europe
Relevance for youth policy today
Volume 2

Edited by Filip Coussée, Griet Verschelden, Tineke Van de Walle,
Marta Mędlińska and Howard Williamson

Council of Europe Publishing
The opinions expressed in this work are the responsibility of the author(s) and do not necessarily reflect the official policy of the European Commission or the Council of Europe, their member states or the organisations co-operating with the institutions.

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be translated, reproduced or transmitted, in any form or by any means, electronic (CD-Rom, Internet, etc.) or mechanical, including photocopying, recording or any information storage or retrieval system, without prior permission in writing from the Public Information and Publications Division, Directorate of Communication (F-67075 Strasbourg Cedex or publishing@coe.int).

To receive further information about the partnership between the European Commission and the Council of Europe in the field of youth, please visit our website at http://www.youth-partnership.net or contact us by e-mail at youth-partnership@coe.int.
Contents

Introduction
In search of the sources of youth work and youth policy in Europe
Hanjo Schild and Jan Vanhee 5

Key points of the opening address
Ulrich Bunjes 7

The history of youth work – Re-socialising the youth question?
Filip Coussée 9

The relevance of history in youth work
Tony Jeffs 15

The evolution of public policies for youth work in the French-speaking community of Belgium
Gauthier Simon 25

The history of youth work and its influence on youth policy – The perspective of the German-speaking community of Belgium
Xavier Hurlet 41

Youth policy in the Dutch-speaking community of Belgium
Johan Van Gaens 57

Youth work in the Netherlands – History and future direction
Hans van Ewijk 69

For God’s sake, tie your ropes together: the (recent) history of youth work in Wales – Political betrayal, professional infighting and practice inertia
Howard Williamson 83

Youth work in Ireland – Some historical reflections
Maurice Devlin 93

Zigzagging in a labyrinth – Towards “good” Hungarian youth work
Péter Wootsch 105

The history of youth work – The South African perspective
Lwazi Mboyi 111

The history of European youth policy
Bjorn Jaaberg Hansen 119

The history of European youth work and its relevance for youth policy today – Conclusions
Filip Coussée, Griet Verschelden, Tineke Van de Walle, Marta Mędrziska and Howard Williamson 125
The social and pedagogical identity of youth work – Learning from two history workshops

Filip Cousséé, Griet Verschelden, Tineke Van de Walle, Marta Medlińska and Howard Williamson

The contributors
Youth work starts where young people are. It is perhaps this general principle that seems to create a certain 'myopic view' in youth work practice, policy and research. We tend to concentrate on the questions of today and take them as a starting point for our future plans. This sometimes makes youth work an uncertain and fragile practice. The lack of historical consciousness makes youth work vulnerable to instrumentalisation, whether by policymakers or even by young people themselves, claiming youth work should fulfil the needs they define to be urgent and relevant.

Youth work is a contingent practice and history will not reveal us its one and only real identity. Knowing where we come from, however, is an important step in establishing a confident, though not arrogant, identity. Youth work is a social and pedagogical practice that must be adapted to very diverse historical, geographic and social contexts, but there are still some underlying, basic assumptions that have structured practices and policies to date and continue to do so. In this light, a cross-cultural and transnational perspective can be most enlightening.

This second volume of The history of youth work in Europe, presents the youth work histories of some very different countries: Belgium and its three communities, the Netherlands, Ireland, Wales and Hungary. The reader is also introduced in the history of the relatively young European youth policies, and is even given a glimpse beyond European borders with a history of youth work in South Africa.