Contents

LIST OF MAPS, FIGURES, AND TABLES ................................................................. vii

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT ....................................................................................... ix

CHAPTER I

ROBERT J. ANTONY
Integrating Maritime Asia with World, Transnational, and Local History:
An Introduction ........................................................................................................ 1

CHAPTER II

JUDITH CAMERON
A Prehistoric Maritime Silk Road: Merchants, Boats, Cloth and Jade ......................... 25

CHAPTER III

HUGH R. CLARK
The Coastal Cultures of Ancient Fujian and the Roots of Regional Cults ......................... 43

CHAPTER IV

JOHN W. CHAFFEE
Pu Shougeng Reconsidered:
Pu, His Family, and their Role in the Maritime Trade of Quanzhou .............................. 63

CHAPTER V

UBALDO IACCARINO
Conquistadors of the Celestial Empire:
The Spanish Policy toward China at the End of the 16th Century ............................... 77
CHAPTER VI

MARIA GRAZIA PETRUCCI
Caught Between Piracy and Trade: The Shimazu of Southern Japan
at the Onset of the New Tokugawa Regime, 1599–1630.............................. 99

CHAPTER VII

XING HANG
Leizhou Pirates and the Making of the Mekong Delta.............................. 115

CHAPTER VIII

SUSAN E. SCHOPP
French Sea Routes to Canton, 1698–1792.............................................. 133

CHAPTER IX

ADAM CLULOW
Distant Justice: Maritime Networks and Legal Forum Shopping.............. 151

CHAPTER X

ROBERT J. ANTONY
Pirates, Dragon Ladies, and Steamships:
On the Changing Forms of Modern China’s Piracy................................. 165

CHAPTER XI

ANGELA SCHOTTENHAMMER
China’s Rise and Retreat as a Maritime Power......................................... 189

INDEX .................................................................................................. 213
LIST OF MAPS, FIGURES, AND TABLES

ROBERT J. ANTONY
Map 1.1., 4: Maritime Eastern Asia
Map 1.2., 5: Sailing routes across the South China Sea World
Map 1.3., 12: Overlapping spheres of the South China Sea World
Map 1.4., 14: Transregional sailing routes of maritime raiders in the South China Sea

JUDITH CAMERON
Map 2.1., 27: Key early Neolithic cloth production sites belonging to the Hemudu culture (5500-3300 BCE) and the distribution of late Neolithic sites belonging to the Majiabang sites (5000-3300 BCE)
Map 2.1., 29: Distribution of prehistoric cloth production sites in Taiwan and island Southeast Asia
Fig. 2.1., 28: The remains of an early Neolithic wooden boat from Kuahuqiao
Fig. 2.2., 35: Tracings of charcoal drawings of maritime vessels depicted on the roof of the Hagop Bilo habitation shelter, Sabah
Fig. 2.3., 37: Boat depictions on the walls of the Painted Cave, Borneo
Fig. 2.4., 38: Boat coffins remaining on the cave floor of the Painted Cave, Borneo

HUGH R. CLARK
Map 3.1., 44: Chinese migration routes
Map 3.2., 47: Modern Putian Prefecture and the Xinghua Bay
Map 3.3., 57: Central places to the Baidu Cult

JOHN W. CHAFFEE
Map 4.1., 64: Fujian Province

UBALDO IACCARINO
Map 5.1., 78: Philippines and South China Sea

MARIA GRAZIA PETRUCCI
Map 6.1., 100: Tokugawa Japan and Ryūkyū
XING HANG
Map 7.1, 118: The Gulf of Tonkin

SUSAN E. SCHOPP
Map 8.1, 144: Eighteenth-century French sea routes between France and China via the Cape of Good Hope
Map 8.2, 147: French sea route to China via Cape Horn, 1716
Fig. 8.1, 137: Diagram of Asian wind systems

ROBERT J. ANTONY
Map 10.1, 166: The South China coast, c. 1900
Map 10.2, 170: Bias Bay and the Pearl River Delta, c. 1900
Fig. 10.1, 169: Postcard depicting the beheading of Namoa pirates in 1891
Fig. 10.2, 176: Portuguese monument commemorating the victory over pirates in Coloane in July 1910
Fig. 10.3, 181: Male and female members of Lai Choi San’s gang
Fig. 10.4, 183: Fig. 10.4. Chasing Chinese pirates
Table 10.1, 172-3: Reported piracies on the South China Coast, 1874–1894
Table 10.2, 178: Occupations of convicted pirates in South China, 1780–1885
Table 10.3, 185: Hong Kong police report of piracy incidents, January to May 18
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Many people have been involved in the making of this volume and we are deeply grateful to them all. This book originated at the maritime studies conference, “Beyond the Silk Road: Asian Maritime History and Culture,” that was held in Shanghai on 20-21 August 2015. Over sixty scholars from around the world presented papers either in English or in Chinese at this gathering. Firstly, we sincerely thank the China Maritime Museum 中国航海博物馆 and McGill University’s Indian Ocean World Centre for organizing the conference and for providing a forum where we could openly share and discuss a multitude of topics related to East Asia’s maritime history and culture. In particular we gratefully acknowledge the wholehearted encouragement and support of the leaders of the China Maritime Museum, Xu Zuyuan 徐祖远, Director, Qian Jianguo 钱建国, Vice-Director, and Dr. Zhou Qunhua 周群华, Assistant Director and Chief of the Academic and Research Department, for making this conference possible. We would also like to thank Zhao Li 赵莉, Gu Yugui 顾宇辉, and the museum staff for their logistic support before, during, and after the conference. Without their kind help nothing would have been possible. Our gratitude also extends to all the participants for the many lively and informative presentations and discussions both during and after the conference. Everyone benefited from such a diverse group of international scholars from many disciplines. Special thanks likewise go to our skillful translators, Vincent Ho 何伟杰, Xue Qianhui 薛千惠, Kuang Meihua 邝美华, and Lanshin Chang 张兰馨, who were kept busy throughout the two-day conference. In editing this book, we appreciate the help and encouragements given by friends and colleagues at McGill University, Ghent University, the University of Salzburg and Guangzhou University, especially Ma Guang 马光, Li Man 李漫, and Leng Dong 冷东. Finally, but not least, the editors want to thank the Gerda Henkel Foundation and the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada (SSHRC) for their financial support. This publication is part of the MCRI (Major Collaborative Research Initiative) project “The Indian Ocean World – The Making of the First Global Economy in the Context of Human-Environment Interaction”, sponsored by the SSHRC and based at the Indian Ocean World Centre (IOWC), History Department, McGill University.